

Situations Guide

1. Billy was talking with his friend John. John wanted to play Billy in one-on-one basketball. Billy said, “I’m so good at basketball. I’m way better than you’ll ever be. You’ll never be able to beat me.”
2. Susan and Kelsi were making Christmas cards for their families. Susan said, “Wow, Kelsi, you’re really good at coloring in the lines. I’m good at drawing a Christmas tree, but not coloring. How about I draw the Christmas trees on each card, and you color them in so all of our cards will look really nice!”
3. Michael and his little brother were playing battleship. Michael won the first game. Even though he knew he was better than his little brother, he said, “I won that game, but you did a good job. Let’s keep playing, this is fun.”
4. Molly was jumping rope with her little sister. They were playing to see who could make the most jumps in one minute. After winning three times in a row, Molly said, “I win every time because I’m the best at jumping rope and you’re not!”
5. At school one day, Drew’s teacher chose him to be the team leader for a project the class was doing. When it was time for recess, Drew and his classmates rushed outside to play kickball. Drew said, “I should get to go first in line to kick because I’m the best in the class. Our teacher likes me the most since she picked me to be the team leader.”
6. In art class, the teacher told Angela she did a really good job with her painting. She showed it to the class so everyone could see. Angela felt honored that her teacher liked her painting, but she told her friends beside her that they did a really good job on their paintings, too.
